

Detecting Parkinson's Disease using Machine learning

Detection of disease is the main concern in many medical places. Early detection of disease produces proper monitory response and adherence to treatment works. With the help of machine learning, we can easily identify whether this disease causes the human intervention according to the state of nerve cells in the brain.

Empathy map from the detection of Parkinson's Disease using Machine Learning

